

The Never-Ending Legacy of Lottie Moon: Missionary to China

Lottie Moon was a pioneering missionary to China who dedicated her life to serving the Chinese people. She was born in Albemarle County, Virginia, in 1840. She was the daughter of a slave owner and grew up in a wealthy home. Despite her privileged upbringing, Lottie had a heart for the poor and marginalized. She was deeply affected by the stories of missionaries who were working in China, and she felt called to go and serve there herself.
